From the Chamber President:

Greetings Chamber Friends!

September is here and it's time for apple-picking, soup-making, and leaf-pile-jumping! These are such simple joys, but I love that we celebrate them this time of year. We ignore that autumn is really a reminder that winter is just around the corner. We focus on the good things!

If you ask anyone to describe autumn, I bet you'll hear about walks in the woods to enjoy the changing leaves, sweatshirt weather, football games, cider-making, and Indian summer. Everyone has their romanticized version of fall.

This should be the same technique you're using to build your business' brand image. What mental imagery are you painting of your brand? What are the great and unique benefits of being your customer? My sister is a branding wiz. Her job is to attract doctors and nurses to work at her northern Minnesota hospital. Most of us would think – why would a Physician from Arizona want to move to northern Minnesota for a family practice position?

Well, because it's LAKE COUNTRY! Who doesn't want a home on the lake? Now you can enjoy the view, waterski on your day off, or invite the neighbors over for a good 'ol Minnesota hot dish potluck?! We're not going to talk about the fact that the lakes are frozen eight months out of the year.

Make that your goal this month – to understand what is beautiful and unique about your business and play that up in your business' social media feed. Create an image, convey a feeling – make your customer feel exclusive, classy or cool. Design your aesthetic and make it synonymous with your brand, just like Mother Nature did with autumn!

Best Regards,

Leslie

INBOUND RECRUITING-Not Just Any Job

The future of hiring is to attract candidates that want to join a culture like yours. This is the principle of Inbound Recruiting. It effectively creates its own talent pool. The principle is to strengthen your company brand to attract and retain employees that fit the culture.

Job candidates want to feel as though they control their destiny. That translates into understanding a 'target' employer and determining if it is an environment that they will excel in and enjoy. Informed employers recognize this.

They value showcasing their mission and culture to connect with the right talent. Inbound Recruiting consists of creating branded content that attracts and retains the right employees. The goal of Inbound Recruiting is to build a culturally strong community and effectively display it to attract specific talent that wants to be a part of the whole.

This begins by creating a candidate persona and developing a strategy to market it. Job descriptions for all positions must be founded on existing employees that epitomize the desired culture. The personality itself must benefit from working in the desired culture. The culture can passively sell itself to the target market. Off-line and online mediums are essential. Additionally, meetups, networking events and speaking at conferences can sell a culture to candidates that fit.

A successful Inbound Recruiting strategy will generate a corporate talent pool that can be tapped for a well-spring of high level performance.

Freedom Flight

By Luke Cesnik, President/Pilot

Floating on a gentle breeze high above the ground, gazing at an amazing horizon as the sky glows golden with the rising or setting hues of the sun is staggering! The ride will leave you speechless. But for these hot air balloons there's more. Much more . . . there is a purpose.

The idea of Freedom Flight, Inc. was started in 1989 by our co-founder: Dr. Jim Tuorila, Ph.D. and Bill Nohner, who were psychologists working at the St. Cloud VA hospital. They felt a hot air balloon would be a good tactic of gaining media attention for American military still alive and being held against their will in foreign countries.

The publicity could mean a ground swell of public support to bring those veterans home. We started with balloon #I and over the years added #II, #III and #IV and after wearing out #I balloon we added #V which is our 3-D balloon.

The balloons have flown in six different countries and 42 states. Freedom Flight soars over 30 to 40 events each year operated by six volunteer Pilots, dozens of Crew Chiefs and countless crew members. We also fly the balloons to honor all those we left behind and their family members still waiting for their return home.

Luke Cesnik, a Vietnam Veteran from the US Air Force and joined Freedom Flight in 1990 and has served in many different capacities including being the president for more than 15 years. He wanted to share a few of his memories from past years.

After flying for the past 27 years I have many wonderful memories but one really stands out in my mind as one of the best. It was the time I flew the Pilot and the Navigator from a B-52 that was shot down over Hanoi during the Vietnam War.

They were the only survivors and they were both captured and were held as prisoners of war at the infamous Hanoi Hilton prison camp.

Now they were flying in the POW balloon with me as we dedicated the flight to the ones they lost that day when they were shot down.

Another flight that stands out is when I got to see the snow fall up. I was flying in Hudson, WI and while we were flying it began to snow huge flakes and the visibility started to lower. I picked a good place to land and began the decent. As we began descending faster than the snow was falling, it looked like the snow was falling up. One of the women flying with me said that she felt like she was in a snow globe. She said it was like floating in a dream.

Of course, each time I fly a "bucket list" ride for someone dying of a terminal disease, it is always very emotional.

Freedom Flight is currently looking for a volunteer as the lead fundraiser. You can reach out to Jane Zilka directly at 612-749-9850.

Freedom Flight is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization that is made up of all volunteers and runs completely on donations. You can find out more at www.freedomflight.org or contact Luke at 320-267-5481.

BALLOONING TIPS

Be flexible with your schedule

Prepare to get up early.

Listen to the staff.

Wear layers and bring a hat and leather gloves.

Just get in the basket-over the top, there is no door.

Enjoy the amazing views

Don't be afraid of heights.

There are no bathrooms at 5000 feet-plan accordingly. Enough said.

Bring your cameras, but keep belongings secured.

6 Mistakes When Caring For Your Aging Parents

As an adult child, caring for an aging or sick parent is a major responsibility. While there are many factors and decisions to consider, there are also precautions the adult child must prepare for and seek to avoid while caring for their aging parent.

Failure to plan ahead. Be sure to take proactive steps for long-term care in regards to your parent. Research different living options available and what the best option may be for them; in-home care, adult daycare, assisted living, etc. Meet with healthcare or senior care specialist to discuss your specific situation, figure out together what the best option for your parent or parents may be.

Emotionally unprepared. Failing to prepare yourself emotionally for the changes that come with aging parents can have a permanent effect on you.

Give yourself enough time to cope mentally and emotionally, especially if you're now sharing your house with your parent or parents, they're suffering from an illness, or they're experiencing memory problems which contribute to moodiness or frustration.

The more emotionally and mentally prepared you are, the more patience and understanding you will have with your aging parent.

Give them space to fail. Of course you want to protect your parents as they protected you as a child. However, try to remember, that as a child, often times you needed and wanted your own space to try things yourself.

The same goes for your parents. Give them the space to figure out their own care needs, as long as they aren't facing severe risks. Small needs like keeping up with the house, cooking, home repairs, etc.

Failing to understand the overall situation. Not evaluating your parent or parents' cognitive ability and overall health won't help you understand their situation any better and will lead to more frustration.

Have them evaluated for dementia, early signs of Alzheimer's or other degenerative cognitive diseases, as well as a full health evaluation to better understand the care options, treatments and medications that need to be changed or taken.

Failing to let your parents feel a sense of control. Everyone needs and wants to feel in control of their lives, no matter what age they are or how ill they become.

It's natural to want to help your parents without asking them, but instead discuss with them their opinions and wants so they feel they are able to have a say still, and find a way to compromise on issues that you may not see eye-to-eye on. Remember, it's still their life.

Neglecting to take proper care of yourself. It's easy to become so caught up with taking care of your aging or sick parent, you forget about your own health, which will slowly begin to deteriorate.

Remember, to take time for yourself ever so often, find a support group, schedule and maintain regular doctor appointments. If you're not healthy and taken care of, it will reflect on the care you provide for your parent.

SPOT Rehab and Home Health Care has trained specialized to assist you and your parent to be successful in their home, wherever HOME is.
